Consulting and Services

JCMwave provides software consulting, development, support, maintenance, and training services to our customers.

We offer product related quality IT services and hardware support to our clients be it on-site or off-site.

We support the integration of JCMwave's software into existing hardware and software platforms.

We support our partners in projectoriented outsourcing of extensive simulation tasks and perform goaloriented design, analysis and optimization of optical components.

Our consulting team consists of optics and numerics experts with a strong background in mathematics, physics, and computer science. Please contact us for a discussion of your research or development project.
